FEBRUARY-MARCH 2021

Welcome by Robert Carolin, Associate Dean, Global Programs & Services

A very warm welcome to our first edition of "Global Matters," a quarterly newsletter to keep faculty and staff here at CSUSM informed of international efforts and opportunities.

I am proud to launch this new initiative and to share interesting articles and highlights. In my 10 years here at CSUSM, I have been very impressed with the interest of our faculty and staff in promoting international engagement. We hope that you will take the time to share "your" stories through this forum and enlighten your colleagues on all that CSUSM is doing in the international arena.

Now more than ever, we need to embrace the efforts on diversity and inclusion and international engagement is a very important part of that effort.

Whether it is faculty leading a group of students abroad through one of our high impact practices in Study Abroad or sharing efforts to make our campus more welcoming to international students or submitting grant proposals for international research, CSUSM is doing a great deal and this newsletter is part of our effort to share this with the broader community.

I hope that you will take the time to review this and provide feedback on what you would like to see in upcoming issues.

Faculty News

During the pandemic, faculty have been creative in establishing innovative ways to remain engaged with colleagues abroad. CSUSM faculty members have created an "International Research Faculty Working Group" to connect and offer best practices. Nine faculty members piloted a brown bag lunch talk on November 18th to share their research and explain their efforts to continue in a virtual format.

Professor "Lia" Uy-Tioco hosted and presented this event along with panelists; Ranjeeta Basu, Dino Bozonelos, William Byun, Elvis Nshom, Elizabeth Ridder, Lucy Solomon, Xiaoye She and Jon Spenard. In addition, there were several faculty who attended to learn more about this working group. For more information, contact Lia at: cuytioco@csusm
