| This course emphasizes community organization as a major educational approach to community dynamics, social change and community participation in addressing health problems. The course explores methods of identifying and analyzing community health problems and their causes. Participants will examine the role of individuals, community institutions, and public health practitioners in effecting solutions to community health problems. The course stresses advancement both in theoretical knowledge in areas of community organization and community change and in the application of community organization skills such as needs assessment. | | | | | | |

| The School of Nursing has a great opportunity to invite the DoD Program Manager for HIV/AIDS in Swaziland as a visiting professor to present this course. Mr. Kunene was educated as a teacher, and then in public health. He has been a teacher and held several public health positions in Swaziland, primarily focused on the biggest public health problem in Swaziland – HIV/AIDS. He has worked with organizing and building communities, focusing on health in Swaziland and has experience in working with the Ministry of Health and the government to do this work. Our university has a community and international focus and this course will be of great interest to students. | | | | | | |

Fwd: NURS 496-9 - Community Organization and Community Building for Health

Hi Lourdes,

I am growing concerned about the overall picture emerging from COEHHS with curricular duplication. However the faculty I spoke with did not object to this course despite the overlap (see below).

This looks like an important topic that has overlap with Soc., but as Don suggests, we don't seem to be able to sustain such courses with a critical mass of students. Given this reality, I don't think we have grounds to oppose Nursing in offering it.

Hi Sharon,

David asked that I send you the attached topic, to be offered through Extended Learning, for your review. Please let us know if you have any comments and/or concerns.

Thank you.

Lourdes
